NEW YORK, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1888.

YELLING FOR HILL.

Democrats Will Renominate Him Unanimously.

Arrival of the Advance Guard in Buffalo This Morning.

What the Convention Will Probably Do

To-Morrow Afternoon.

INPECTAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. BUFFALO, Sept. 11,-The advance guards of the Democracy of the State have arrived and the hotel corridors are thronged with wellknown party men. There promises to be a enticinated and every one is wondering how the crowds can be taken care of.

The International Fair has brought crowds of strangers to the city, and now the Democratic pilgrims are pouring in by every train. The local Democratic Committee has arranged for special trains for Niagara Falls, and hundreds of Democrats will have to go the Falls for hotel accommodations.

The convention will be called to order at noon to-morrow and it will probably be a very harmonious body. Gov. Hill will be nnanimously renominated by acclamation. There is no opposition to him and no opponent has so far materialized. Lieut.

ponent has so far materialized. Lieut.Gov. Jones will also be renominated, and John Clinton Gray, who is now a Judge of the Court of Appeals by appointment, will be nominated for that Court.

The platform will not differ much from the platforms of 1885 and 1887. There may be a little change in the excise plank. It may be touched up to meet the suggestions of Gov.
Hill and to follow his acts as Governor.

The delegates from the cities are opposed to a backdown on the excise question.

The Tammany Hall special arrived here at 9 o'clock this morning. The 300 braves looked tired. The reception they received at Troy was too much for them. They all sav that the reception given them by the Trojans was the greatest demonstration of the kind they ever saw.

The Purroy Democrats are here in force, and are wearing immense green badges. The leaders of the Furroy people want to get in the Tammany Hall list of delegates. The County Democracy delegates will arrive tonight. The Tammany Hall shouters are already yelling for David B. Hill.

The Tenth District Wigwamites are wearing Hill badges.

ME, RULLMAN'S ROMANCE.

He Was Married on His Death-Bed to His Former Travelling Companion. On the day of the funeral of Frederick Valentine Rullman, the ticket speculator who died at his home at Rye Neck, Sept. 1, there appeared a handsome, well-dressed woman of about thirty-three years of age who proved herself by her marriage certificate to be the widow of Mr. Rullman.

The woman and her two sons, whom she said were Mr. Rullman's children, attended the funeral and have since remained in possession of the Rye Neck house. The woman was formerly Aurelia Matyka.

The woman was formerly Aurelia Matyka.

Mr. Rullman met her sixteen years ago at Vienna, when he was abroad in theatrical business, and she afterwards travelled with him as his clerk. He married her Aug. 25, while he was on his sick bed, as an act of justice. His first wife had died about two months before. Miss Matyka would have waited a year, but it was found that Mr. Rullman could not live, and he hastened the marriage.

Mr. Rullman's will was filed for probate in the Surrogate's office to-day. It had been in Mr. Rullman's private vault in the Lincoln Safe Deposit Vaults and was produced on order of Surrogate Ransom.

The income of the $100,000 estate is left to his wife, and after her death to the two children, Clotide and Frederick. Mr. Rullman disinherits his daughter, Mrs. Ellen Miller, except in the improbable contingency that in case little Clotilde dies she shall have her share.

HANGING OUT OF THE WINDOW.

An Old Man's Strange Suicidal Death in

Frederick Miller, sixty-seven years of age, believed to be a commission agent, hanged himself from the window of his room last night, in his boarding-house, 102 Eighth

He must have accomplished his spicidal act during the night, but his body was not discovered until 10 o'clock this morning. It was hanging out of the rear window the old man having tied the rope to an iron bar and then let himself down outside. The body then let himself down outside. The body was stiff and cold.

The old man had been out of employment some months, and was supported by his married daughter. Mrs. Stretchstrom, who inherited $15,000 a short time ago.

It is supposed he committed suicide because he did not want to be dependent on her any longer. Coroner Nugent will hold the inquest.

The Nantilus Club Regatta. On next Saturday afternoon the fourth annual regatta of the Nautilus Boat Club takes piace at the boat-house at Bay Ridge. The affair promises to be unusually successful. The races to be rowed are single gis senior, in which young Hestrick is entered; single gig junior, classes A and B; double gir, senior and junior; four-oared gig, senior and junior; eight-oared shell race, a special race between Thomas F. Crean and William Morrick, in singles, and a swimming race. The special feature is that the affair is a ladies' regusta. The Nautiliaes any next Saturday's event will be far ahead of their best previous efforts.

The Umbrella Murder Mystery. The mystery as to the death of James Fogarty, the young man who was jabbed in the eye with a umbrella at Catherine and Cherry streets early Sunday morning, and who died yesterday in Gouverneur Hospital, has not been solved. Capt. Garland and Detective Leary are at work on the case, but they have as yet no due to the murderer's identity.

WEIGHING THOSE STRINGS OF FISH

COUNTIES OFF TO BUFFALO.

They Leave Early and in a Happy Mood for the Democratic Convention.

The Grand Central Depot, in and about the waiting rooms of the Hudson River road especially, presented a scene of bustle larger attendance at the convention than was and confusion unusual for the hour of 7 o'clock this morning.

Handsome, stalwart, well-dressed men elbowed one another, cracked jokes, and ap-bowed one another, cracked jokes, and appeared to be in the best of humor with them, solves and the world in general.

Every one who saw them knew who they were. They were the County Democracy delegates to the State Convention, who will add their voices to the general hail that will welcome the nomination of a Democratic candidate for Governor.

Like a troop of jolly schoolboys they finally boarded the 7.30 o'clock train and started for Buffalo. They will dine at Utica. Here are the names of those whose faces were seen in the throng of delegates and their friends:

HIS CYCLONIC MAJESTY.

Having Veered His Course to Seaward, He May Spend All Ris Force Outside.

There are still indications that the erratic West Indian cyclone which has been hovering about the Southern coast for the past few days has not yet decided to take itself off, in spite of all the inducements which patriotic citizens have offered it to vamoose.

Yesterday it wrs hanging around Cape Hatteras, and at 8 o'clock this morning it was turking somewhere out at sea just opposite Norfolk, Va. This was indicated, according to the clerk of the Weather Bureau, by the low barometer and rains in that region, while at Hatteras the weather was bright and clear.

Whether the atmosphere terror will work

Whether the atmosphere terror will work its way still further up the coast before it strikes in again, or whether it will go off to see and disappear entirely, is one of the meteorological mysteries which even the oracular Sergt. Dunn cannot solve.

Judging from the state of affairs this morning the sergeant was inclined to think that its probable course would be seaward. If it did not go out too far it might whirl around again and reach the coast somewhere in the neighborhood of Nova Scotia or Labrador, but if it got as far as the Gulf Stream it would inevitably follow that over to the coast of the British Isles.

In any event it would be well, he said, for sea captains sailing for the south and southeast to be very careful and keep a sharp lookout for the enemy, as heavy blows might be met almost anywhere in the South Atlantic.

MR. BENNETT SPEAKS

At Last the Old Broker Tells His Story.

But the Mystery of the Crime is Still Unsolved.

Attacked From Behind and Robbed of His Money.

Broker Daniel H. Bennett returned to consciousness this morning, but the mystery which surrounded the murderous assault upon him at his home on Jersey Heights Saturday night remains apparently as impenetrable as ever. He has made a statement, but says that he knows absolutely nothing of the assault. An Evening World reporter was one of the earliest callers at the Bennett residence in Forrest street this morning and interviewed the son, Augustus, who has been suspected as the possible assailant of his father. The young man said that at about 4 o'clock this morning he awoke and went down to his father's room, where he found Roundsman McIntyre, of the Fifth Precinct, who had been detailed to watch at the old gentleman's Soon after old Mr. Bennett awoke talkative and apparently as well mentally as before the assault.

He said. "I feel better," and then re marked, as he put his hand to his head : "My head feels sore." A few mom-being told that it was Tuesday, said that he remembered coming home Saturday, and then "I remember everything, but can't talk then "I remember everything, but can't talk it."

After this he fell asleep, waking at 6.50, fully conscious, and related his experience of Saturday in answer to his son and Roundsman McIntyre. He said:

"I left the office at 2 p. M. Saturday and came directly home. I spent the afternoon in the house and took supper here. Lucy was here. I went to bed at 9 o'clock."

"When I came into the house in the afternoon I left the outside vestibule door open, but the inside door was locked. I don't know whether I left my bedroom door open or not. I never lock it."

When told that he had been murderously assaulted, Mr. Bennett asked for his clothing and discovered the robbery of his watch and money.

assaulted, Mr. Bennett asked for his clothing and discovered the robbery of his watch and money.

He said that he had $40 in bills and $1.25 in change, all in his pocketbook, and but $4 in bills and 40 cents in change was found.

There were several compariments in the pocketbook and young Bennett said that his father kept large bills in one and small bills and change in another. The thief, in his haste, he thought, had only taken the roll of large bills.

So well did Mr. Bennett feel this morning that he got up and took a bath and ate a hearty breakfast.

Augustus seemed very much overjoyed at his father's recovery and told The Evening World reporter that he had eaten his first meal since the unfortunate affair this morning.

In his report to Capt. Smith of the old gentleman's statements, Roundsman McIntyre says that Mr. Bennett stated that he awoke some time Sunday morning and felt blood on the pillow.

He said also: "I do not know who struck me or with what I was struck. They probably got in the front door, for I don't think I shut it when I went to bed."

When Chief of Police Murphy was notified of Mr. Bennett's regaining consciousness he went directly to the house in Forrest.

When Chief of Police Murphy was notified of Mr. Bennett's regaining consciousness he went directly to the house in Forrest street with Dr. Wilkinson to interview him, with a view to getting some clue to the perpetrator of the crime.

The statement which he obtained was almost identical with that made by the injured man to his son and Roundsman McIntyre earlier in the morning.

The additional information he obtained was that the colored servant. Lucy Fleming.

The additional information he obtained was that the colored servant, Lucy Fleming, was in the house when he went to bed.

'He persisted in repeating three or four times: 'The girl had nothing to do with it. We know her to be perfectly honest.' Ma. Bennett showed the Chief how he usually lay abed, and it demonstrated how a man could easily deal the blow which came near costing him his life, while he lay in this position.

The old gentleman said that he had no enemies who could have any possible motive for assassinating him, and insisted that the assault must have been committed by a robber.

When asked who told him that the deed was that of a robber, he said one of his sons had, or rather that he heard one of them say so in his presence yesterday.

had, or rather that he heard one of them say so in his presence yesterday.

Chief Murphy had no theory to advance in view of the new developments in the case and carefully refrained from furnishing the press with a clue which is in his postession, and which may lead to the arrest of Mr. Bennett's assailant.

This was obtained by The Evening World reporter in an interview with the servant-girl, Lucy Fleming, this morning.

She said that about 8 o'clock Saturday morning an expressman came to the house

She said that about 8 o'clock Saturday morning an expressman came to the house and delivered a package of cofies from New York. Mr. Bennett saw him coming, went to the door, admitted him to the house and went out with him, talking all the while on general topics.

The express wagon was one of the Stanton Express Company's, and the driver was James Higbee, who was arrested yesterday for the Tate burglary, committed a few blocks away the same night that the assault was committed on old Mr. Bennett.

Higbee left a package at the Taite House that evening.

Highee left a package at the Taite House that evening.
Detectives Holtic, Clos and Dalton were despatched on the case immediately after Chief Murphy's return to Police Head-quarters to look up Highee's movements on Saturday night, and locate the watch, money and weapon with which the assaurt was committed, if possible.
Highee was committed to await examination this morning.

John Tuttle, a Religious Crank, Killed.

NORWALK, CORR., Sept. 11.—John Tuttle, a religious crank, boarded the Housatonic freight teamer Shenandoab, at Wilson Point, yesterday steamer Shenandoan, at whison rount, yesteroay afternoon, and got into a bot argument with some of the crew. He was ordered to leave the boat, and Edward Believine was leading him away, when he struck Believine with a heavy c-ne, nearly sev-ering his ear from the head. Believinespicked up a heavy shovel and struck Tuttle in the nead. Con-cussion of the brain ensued and Tuttle died this morning. Believine was arrested and placed in rea South Norwaik lock-up.

SEVENTY YEARS MATES TWENTY.

reached the age of twenty, therefore the surprise.
Shortly before 8 o'clock last evening a coach drew up to the handsome residence of Justice Weed, on Henderson street, and from it two gentlemen and a lady alighted. When the Justice met the party in the drawing-room, he recognized his old friend, Mr. Wolbert, but hardly found strength to shake his hand when he learned that the old gentleman wished to be married to the blushing young girl at his side. Mr. Wolbert introduced his other con

Mr. Wolbert introduced his other companion as Mr. L. H. Sage, of Hackensack, and nervously asked the Justice to hurry the ceremony. The Justice accordingly hurried.

The bride gave her name as Mary Eliza McCormack, of 267 York street. She blushed prettily as the process of tying the knot continued. As soon as the last word left the lips of the Justice, Mr. Wolbert clasped his bride in his arms and imprinted a resounding smack upon her rosy lips.

'I suppose I, too, may have the usual privilege?" remarked the Justice.

'May it please the Court." answered Mr. Wolbert in alarm, "your last words were whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder.' If you kiss my wife you might do that, you know."

The Justice lost his kiss, and the bride and groom drove to the Academy of Music to see a play with the title of "Drifting Apart," in which a young wife deserts her loving old husband.

In the third act the Chairman of the Democratic clubs is said to have wept aloud.

After the play a serenade by the Crescent Club restored his happiness and his second wedded life began.

Mr. Wolbert is a well-to-do auctioneer. He lives on Barrow street with his son and two daughters, who are all older than his bride. He met Miss McCormack three months ago, and has paid her devoted attention ever since. His reason for marrying her is tersely put in his own words:

"I liked the girl and respected her," he said, "and rather than have her name bandied about with mine, because of our ages, as has been done, I married her."

Miss McCormack is a daughter of Nicholas McCormack, once a well-to-do saddler, who is now dead. The oddly matched couple will go to housekeeping at once.
What reception they will receive from Mr. Wolbert's grown son and daughter is a matter of conjecture.
The wedding is the sensation of the hour, and the old Democratic war-horse is receiving congratulations at every step.

Can It Be a Republican Scheme to S cure the Celestial Vote?

The following remarkable publication pears this week in the Chinese News, edited by that astute Mongolian, Wong Chin Foo. its appearance at this time, directly after the publication of President Cleveland's letter of acceptance, is calculated to arouse a fluter in the breast of the Republicans. Who knows but what it is Candidate Harrison's long lelayed letter of acceptance? The Republican have been hinting about a cosp d'état for some time past. What more novel than that Gen. Harrison should by a sharp flank movement like this overwhelm all the critics of his record on the Chinese question, and by one masterly stroke of hieroglyphics capture the entire Chinese vote?

Moreover, the undaunted student of Chinese will find in these characters something more than the ordinary laundry accounts, more than the ordinary laundry accounts. In the third line, for instance, he will discover the Chinese equivalent for "Presidential campaign," and just below a phrase that looks very much like the Republican candidate as he is represented by the wicked Democratic cartoonists. Let the intelligent readers of The Evening World, familiar with the intricacies of the situation, look into these things for themselves, and exercising their rights as American citizens, form their own unbiassed opinion.

The expert Chinese editor of The Evening World is, moreover, devoting his best energies to the full solution of this political mystery, and by to-morrow he hopes to throw tery, and by to-morrow he hopes to throw some light upon the subject. IRISHMEN IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Irish-American Independents Indores Cleveland and Thurman.

A bomb of considerable proportions was thrown into the Republican camp late last night, which did not explode until this morn-

Besolutions were also adopted instructing the district leaders to at once proceed to organize their district associations and prepare for active campaign work.

The rooms at 52 Union square are to be made the permanent headquarters of the General Committee, where weekly meetings will be held to receive reports from the various districts.

he had dealt Frank a terrible wound near the heart.

Both Frank and Richard were married and occupied adjoining apartments. A few months ago their mother died, leaving several thousand dollars. She had made no will. Richard and Frank quarrelled frequently over the division of the money. They could not agree upon the amount each should receive.

They were talking of the money last night, when suddenly Richard jumped up and seized a short policeman's club and struck Frank on the head. Then the brothers elinched and it was a fight of a life for a life. Frank drew his knife and plunged it into his brother's side.

Richard's wound is in all probability fatal.

Frank is locked up.

Dehancoy is a pupil of Billy Dacey, and is a feather-weight. He stepped into the ring at 120 pounds, while his adversary weighed 130. Billy Dacey attended his pupil, and Jim Kelly looked after Gleason.

There were three rounds fought, beginning with a bloody nose and a severe rattling for Gleason, under Deiancey's sharp blows, and eading with the complete doing up of the larger man.

A consolation purse of $75 was given to the much damaged Gleason. Delancey was hardly scratened is the fray. He was especially clever with his right.

Capt. Andrews and His Dory Are Back Again.

The Hardy Mariner's Story of His Perilous Trip.

Next Year, He Says, He'll Surely Do the the Whole Passage.

Capt. William A. Andrews and his cockleshell, the Dark Secret, have turned up, the partly captain being alive and well. Skipper Andrews walked into THE EVEN-No World office to-day as brown as a berry and as chipper as a cricket.

THE DARK SECRET. He drew smoke through a black cigar, and threw one leg over the arm of a chair as unconcernedly as though he had been a daily visitor for the past three months.

He came in on the Norwegian bark Nor his morning, and his dory lies at anchor at Quarantine. "Well, you see," said the skipper, started from Point of Pines June 8, and I

"Well, you see," said the skipper, "I had been just two months and a day on the little boat, all alone. I spoke twenty-two vessels during that time, but saw only four sails during the last four weeks.

"I hadn't tasted a morsel of warm food nor drank a cup of hot coffee in all that time cause my alcohol stove got full of water. I took 100 bottles of hygeis distilled water with me, but it was all gone. My fat pork was gone, too.

"It was latitude 46.18 and longitude 39.50, about fifty-five miles more than half way acro-s the ocean, when on that Sunday morning, Aug. 19, I spoke the Nor and asked her captain for pork and water. He was willing enough, but he looked me over and declared I was a darn fool if I didn't come aboard and come back to New York.

"We looked my craft over. She was 14 feet 9 inches long, 5 feet wide and 2 feet deep. We found her bottom badly covered with barnacles and sea grass, and the whole outlit was in a bad way, so I didn't need much coaxin' to get me to abandon the trip and return, specially as I had had some trouble with sharks and whales! Tell us about it," exclaimed a half-dozen reporters all in a breath—or, rather, out of breath.

"Well there was one morning when I turned out," said the skipper, pulling hard on his cigar. "You see, II lost my drag—a drag is a sea anchor. It is a barrel of water. It's the best thing to keep the dory from drifting. Only it an't a dory, 'cause a dory is flat-bottomed. When I turned out that morning I found about a barrel of water.
